21 years ago, in 2001, the website <https://www.politicalcompass.org/> was published. The site asks users to respond to 62 questions in order to rate their political ideology on a two axes grid which is divided by economic (right-left) and social (authoritarian-libertarian). In a 2019 report, artist Joshua Citerella noted that the political compass site can be viewed as a precursor to “e-deologies, radical politics as a form of niche personal branding.”. E-deologies encourage a playful (but often sinister) form of politicking in which people become radicalized online via memes, message boards, and tiktok/youtube. While one can argue that E-deologies makes obscure political theory more accessible to the masses, one could counter that it can be extremely counterintuitive and divisive to many political movements from the “dirtbag-left” to the alt-right. Some political ideologies that are a trademark of “E-deologies” is the Uber reactionary, anarcho-primitivism, a political theory that advocates for a return to “non-civilized” ways of life through deindustrialization and the “Brogressive” Fully Automated Luxury Communism which argues that through a full embrace of sophisticated technologies, society would be free from inequality, and enter a utopia where work is obsolete and there is universal basic income/housing for all. This project/game seeks to explore several E-deologies such as Post-Fordism, Neo-Conservatism, Anarcho-Primitivism, Fully Automated Luxury Communism, Right Libertarianism, and Trans-Humanism through role playing. Through this gamification of political discourse, I want to make students who aren’t familiar with theory understand the playful nature of (theory) that allows readers to (as design collective, Experimental Jetset put it) “make strings of associations that seem totally impossible, and arrive at conclusions that are almost otherworldly.”

Rules

1. Disperse Link to
<https://gusgrossman.github.io/E-deology-Generator-1.0/index.html>
 2. Click the generate button on the homepage.
 3. Read about the e-deology you were assigned at random.
 3. Give students assigned the same E-deology time to revise the E-deology as they see fit for the role playing persona they want to take on collectively.
 4. Get into character BASED ON ASSIGNED E-DEOLOGY!
 5. There will be one member of the group who is the “gamemaster. It is this individuals role to read the question (see contents).
 6. Based on the questions asked, students will be asked to either stay in place , walk to the center of the room or to the other side of the room.
- Staying in place means that based on their assigned e-deology, students feel that they agree with the proposed question.
- Walking to the center means that they’re either neutral, not sure, or on the fence about the proposed question.
- Walking to the other end means that students are in opposition to the proposed question.
- NOTE, NO PERSONAL POLITCAL AND OR MORAL POSTIONS SHOULD BE CONSIDERED WHEN CHOOSING A SIDE OF THE ROOM. IT SHOULD 100% BE BASED ON THE DESCRPTION PROVIDED ON THE WEB PAGE OF YOU RANDOMLY GENERATED E-DELOLOGY!
7. After students choose their sides, ask why they chose the postion they did based on their e-diology. (respones in character strognly encourgaed but not manditory).
 8. Have fun!
